Introduction

- Central bank communication: increasingly important monetary policy tool.
- It provides information to the public regarding the next policy rate movements (“managing expectations”).
- The information is not explicit, so it is not a commitment from the central bank: deviating doesn’t damage credibility.

Collecting Data

- Scrape press releases and policy interest rates from US Federal Reserve website

Natural Language Toolkit (nltk)

- Tokenize strings
- Prune stop-words (if desired)
- Investigate intra- and inter-text similarity
- Use measures like tf-idf to identify exemplar words

Natural Language Toolkit (nltk)

- Collect a set of 'telling' words for classification
- Create infrastructure allowing an algorithm to classify new releases

End Result

- Django-based website allowing user input
- Hosts an algorithm trained on past releases
- Classifies new press releases
